TxDMV Launches New Board Meeting Video Streaming System

AUSTIN – The Texas Department of Motor Vehicles (TxDMV) is bringing government closer to the people by enhancing the technology of its video streaming system. The new features will be available during the next board meeting scheduled for Friday, May 29 at 8 a.m.

The new video streaming system hosted by Texas-based Swagit Productions will make TxDMV board meeting videos viewable in all major streaming formats and on mobile devices. This will make the meetings available to a wider range of end users.

“Enhancing our board meeting stream is one part of our ongoing effort to further automate TxDMV services,” said Executive Director Whitney Brewster. “That includes providing convenient access for our customers and other stakeholders to the important business of the TxDMV board.”

The Lone Star Room at TxDMV headquarters in Austin now has four cameras and 12 microphones to provide top quality video and sound of board meetings.

Board meeting videos and agendas will be archived and indexed together, allowing users to click on specific agenda items and jump directly to the corresponding time in the video archives.
